

ABSTRACT

A fingerprint imaging device includes an optical plate and an imaging system. The optical plate includes an optically-transparent base having a first surface covered with an array of microstructures and a coating deposited on the first surface for receiving a finger.

- 5 To enable fingerprint imaging, the coating has an index of refraction that is different from the index of refraction of the base.

40057131.doc